B: Reading Comprehension (16 Marks)Read the following text carefully then answer the questions below:

The Bactrian camel is most famous for the two large humps on its back. It is a huge camel that can grow to over seven feet tall at the shoulder! It has a brown fur coat that gets long and thick in the winter to help it keep warm in the cold desert. The coat falls off for the summer.

Bactrian camels eat plants. They can eat almost any type of dry and sharp plants that other animal may not eat. Their stomachs are strong, and they have been known to eat clothes and even shoes when extremely hungry. They live in the Gobi and Taklimakan Deserts in northern central Asia. They tend to live in groups of 6 to 20 camels.

Camels store fat in their humps. This fat can be converted to water and energy when they haven't had food or water to drink for some time. A thirsty camel can drink a lot of water. It has been known to drink over 30 gallons of water in just a few minutes!
